Stewart Noakes
Chairman
TCL Group Ltd.

'The NSPCC is a fantastic charity who do great work. We support them in lots of different ways, including carrying their brand with us wherever we go in the form of the Full Stop badges, and the NSPCC logo on our company polo shirts. I am now also part of an advisory team to the NSPCC.

The latest 'Child's Voice Appeal' has our full support and these recent fundraising activities are just the start of our endeavours to help Carrie and her team in making it possible to answer all the calls for ChildLine in the South West.

Huge thanks must also go out to all of the people from RAG at Exeter University for all of their help and support with latest fundraising endeavours.'

"I would like to really thank TCL for their continued fantastic support.

Fundraising activities by businesses like them can make a real difference to our fundraising and the lives of children and young people.

Corporate fundraising is a great way to encourage team-building as well as providing other benefits and we work closely with the businesses that support us to make sure they get a lot out of their relationship with us too."

Carrie Cardale,
NSPCC Corporate Fundraising Manager -South West.

Childs Voice Appeal - Let no cry go unheard

The unanswered call

This is what everyone at the NSPCC dreads. What happens to a child who plucked up the courage to call for help, but didn't get through?

With your help, the NSPCC want to transform ChildLine and the NSPCC HelpLine to answer many more children's cries for help. So that whether they call, email, text or contact them online, they will be there. To do this, the Government is providing £30 million and the NSPCC need to raise a further £50 million.

Together we can make this happen!
